

Drummers are spreading so much in Germany that a new measure for its punishment and prevention is being prepared for presentation to the Imperial Parliament.

A San Francisco merchant says that he picks up from six to a dozen pistol bullets on his flat roof every year, a striking illustration of the number of chance shots fired in the city.

The Due d'Anjou is receiving a succession of large parties at the Chateau of Chantilly. The Countess de Paris and the Duchess de Nemours act as hostess, turn and about.

A bill against dueling, introduced into the South Carolina Legislature, provides the death penalty for the perpetrator and imprisonment and fines for whoever carries the challenge and sees the fight.

The price which England is to be called upon to pay out of the pockets of the English, Scotch and Irish taxpayers, in order to settle forever the disturbing Irish land question, is, according to the Statist, the very modest amount of $1,200,000,000.

The fires of last spring in the swamps of southern New Jersey had the effect of producing the biggest cranberry crop ever known. Growers bewailed their certain ruin, but the fires have produced a treble in quantity and quality.

The committee of the Spinners' association of England, says the New York Mail. A well known and very ambitious lady of Murray Hill has sent to China for a certain rare kind of tea which she proposes to serve at a kottledrum.

A New York florist recently chartered a car to send a piece of decorative work to Cleveland wedding. It was a low, arched, thatched straw, fifteen feet high, and studded with roses and trimmed with wreaths.

A curious new club is about to be established in London, the Knightsbridge, London. It is to be founded by bachelors, who are to be allowed to invite ladies to dinner. When a member marries he is to be permitted to retain his membership on payment of a fine of 25 guineas.

For St. Paul's cathedral, London, a bell weighing ten or twelve tons was wanted. The largest bell hanging there at present weighs only five tons, and the dean and chapter say that this is intolerable. They have already collected $3,250 for a new bell, and they wish to double the amount.

The Cape Cod Canal company, which has been reorganized at Boston, will make a practical survey of the line soon. Before beginning work it must reimburse the old company for its expenditures, assume the responsibility for land damages, and must have been able to describe of $500,000 worth of stock, of which $200,000 shall be paid in.

The Rev. Dr. Wolcott, a Baptist minister at Versailles, Ky., thinks that he has discovered the location of the infernal regions. He says that every star is a burning world. Our sun is one of the smaller of these stars, and is far advanced in the process of combustion. The white stars have a still more intense combustion, and he believes that some such world will be the future abode of the lost.

John Chinaman loves the flavor of the agile octopus. Several Celestials while fishing off Angkor, Cambodia, on the coast, caught a huge devil-fish in their nets. As it came slowly to view on the surface of the water its arms grasped the side of the boat. With a snarl and they succeeded in chopping off the huge feelers, and thus freed their craft. Finally the whole body was got into the boat and the prize conveyed to China town, where it was cut into pieces and sold to various restaurants.

The American Minister in London has submitted to the British Board of Trade the project of an international copyright treaty between England and the United States. Full reciprocal protection is accorded to all authors, provided that within three months after the publication of a work in their own country it is republished by them in the other country.

The Marquis of Hartington's views on the Irish question has been anticipated with eager interest in England. His father, the duke of Devonshire, owns 60,825 acres in Cork, Waterford, and Tipperary, but the rents on these estates have been paid nearly in full. The duke can be said to be very few of the great estates in Ireland.

There are six sugar factories in New Orleans and vicinity. All the molasses is shipped abroad, as the furniture manufacturers do not buy it, preferring to pick and clean it themselves. The total amount paid for the rough molasses by the ginners, upholsterers, and mattress-makers of the city is above $300,000 per year.

The London Economist estimates that the immigrants to this country in 1880 bring with them $35,000,000 in specie, which is equal in value to the United States of each person in addition to the productive resources of the country is $340, so that the number landing in 1880 constitute an actual and potent addition to the wealth of the country of $100,000,000.

German troops so greatly abound in Switzerland, and have lately become such an intolerable nuisance, and the vexatious requirements of the German authorities render their extradition so difficult, that the Federal Council have been constrained to apply to Prince Bismarck for a modification of the treaty which regulates the return of the necessary citizens of the two countries to their respective domiciles.

A splendid picture, which will not fail to create much sensation at the Salon, is that of "L'Esperance," by M. Georges Bertrand, the author of the "Femme a l'Ombelle Rouge," so much admired last year for the brilliancy of its coloring. The standard-bearer of the Cuirassiers has died at his post of honor, killed by a bullet. His companions return with his body, still on horseback, and holding the colors they have fastened on his breast and saddle. A gloomy, wintry landscape is the scene of the episode.

The czar has pardoned his nephew, the Grand Duke Nicholas Constantinevich, whose reckless extravagance and consequent lawlessness were the occasion of his incarceration and subsequent exile to central Asia. The young man has conducted himself in an exemplary manner. Greatly interested in the construction of a railway connecting Siberia with the western part of the Russian empire, the Grand Duke has himself explored the respective regions, and written a masterly report on the best line to be selected for the grand enterprise. The czar, touched by his nephew's penitence, and probably moved by his mother's incessant supplications, is said to have granted him permission to return to St. Petersburg.

Mr. Oscar de Lafayette, grandson of Washington's companion-in-arms, writes a pleasant letter to the Centennial committee, in which he says: "The precious marks of affection which have been shown by the citizens of the United States to him who was a devoted servant in the cause of the war of independence are to his descendants of inestimable value. I have several times had occasion to make this statement, both in the name of my family and in my own name, and would not repeat it in this letter were it not my desire, Mr. Chairman, to express to you once more my personal sentiments, those of the deepest gratitude toward the American people. You may, therefore, rest assured of my lively sympathy with all that relates to the celebration and glory of your great republic, and it is with great pleasure that I join in spirit with the object of the committee."
